Library of Congress Welcomes Lebanon Township Historical Retrospect Publication

We are proud to announce that the Library of Congress in Washington, DC has accepted our locally-authored, Lebanon Township history book into its Local History and Genealogy Collection.

Lebanon Township, 200 Years, An Historical Retrospect of Lebanon Township, New Jersey, was authored, published and copyrighted in 1999 by the Lebanon Township Historical Society to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the incorporation of the township. The edition is filled with antique photos, illustrations, documents, facts and stories that preserve for generations to come, the look and feel of the people, places and events that helped shape our township.

“The idea to create a book that would capture our township history came from the late Ralph Lomerson, long-time township Historian” said Joan Lucas, Curator of the Township of Lebanon Museum. “Each contributing local author was given a section to complete or was assigned a task such as research, and it all came together.”

The publication’s journey to the Library of Congress began earlier this year when township resident, Beverly Koehler attended an open meeting of the Historians at the Lebanon Township Museum. “The Historians were discussing the extra copies of the book that are in storage” said, Ms. Koehler, “and I started thinking about how often I refer to my own copy of this very informative book. I thought that perhaps the Library of Congress would be interested in such a quality product, so I contacted them.” As it turns out, the Library was very interested, and after acquiring the necessary approvals from the Historians and the Township Committee, Ms. Koehler mailed two copies to the Library.

Mr. James Sweany, Assistant Chief of Humanities and Social Sciences Division at the Library of Congress, stated in an acknowledgment letter that, “local histories are very important to the international research clientele who frequent the Library of Congress. We are most grateful to you for sending us this fine work and especially for helping to fulfill one of our most vital front-line missions. Through generations of such gifts, we have assembled the leading book collection of genealogy and local history information in the world.”

Mr. Sweany went on to say that the publication will now be cataloged and labeled en route to the collections of the Library of Congress where researchers will be able to access it by title. Once the work is cataloged, there will be a bibliographic entry describing it in the Library’s Online Catalog at <https://catalog.loc.gov/>. You can search for the book on that webpage with the following Control Number: 2016417649.

There are a limited number of original, hard cover copies of the Lebanon Township Historical Retrospect available for a donation of $20 each. Please call the township museum at (908) 537-6464, or Laurie Hoffman at (908) 638-5249 to reserve a copy. If you are new to our township or have not read this book, it will take you on a delightful journey of discovery into our past.

Obscure New Jersey History Compiled by Nina Savoia, Historian From Jersey in Motion Website

Jersey Shore Pirates

Jersey may not have been known for Captain Jack Sparrow, but turns out the Jersey Shore from the Raritan Bay to Cape May saw the likes of famous pirates including Blackbeard, a.k.a. Edward Teech, and Captain Kidd. Maybe all those pirates swashbuckling the shore inspired Robert Louis Stevenson when he visited Osborne Island in the Manasquan River to write his “treasured novel,” Treasure Island. Oh, and did we mention there’s still those that believe there’s treasure buried at Higby’s Beach in Cape May and Del Haven?

Sandy Hook Lighthouse

Known by many for guiding vessels to safe harbor, what may not be known is that the oldest operating lighthouse in the United States (established in 1764) went “dark” during the Revolutionary War. Colonists removed the light to keep the British “in the dark” as they voyaged through the New York Harbor. The lighthouse was also the target of red coat cannonball fire, however the thick walls of the lighthouse remained unharmed.

Twin Lights

Set 200 feet above sea level in Highlands, NJ, resides the Twin Lights, which has been guiding ships safely into the New York Harbor since 1828 (the current lighthouse was constructed in 1862). Known for being the site of a lot of firsts including the use of the Fresnel lens, which has led to everything from camera lenses to fiber-optics cables, the wireless telegraph, and “Mystery Ray”, a.k.a. radar.

The S.S. Morro Castle Disaster

On the morning of September 8, 1934, this cruise ship en route from Havana to New York, caught fire off of Long Beach Island and burned, killing 137 passengers and crew members. While being towed by the U.S. Coast Guard, the S.S. Morro Castle severed from the line and drifted towards Asbury Park, eventually resting on a sandbar a few yards in front of Convention Hall where she remained throughout the fall and winter until she was towed and scrapped. Today, the use of fire-retardant materials, automatic fire doors, ship-wide fire alarms, and greater attention to fire drills and procedures resulted directly from the Morro Castle disaster.

The Rumrunners

It’s no surprise that the Jersey Shore was not happy about the terms of Prohibition from 1920-1933, and it’s also no surprise that the largest “Rum Row” was off the New Jersey coast, where as many as 60 plus ships would be seen at one time, originally three-miles off the coast until Congress changed it to 12-miles in 1924. Local fishermen would travel out to “Rum Row,” purchase the “goods,” and then bring them back to shore in small, quick boats that could easily outrun Coast Guard ships and dock in any small river.

Lebanon Township Biodiversity:
The Birds of Memorial Park
By Sharon Petzinger,
Environmental & Open Space Commission

This past spring, the Lebanon Township Environmental & Open Space Commission began its journey to inventory the township’s lands for biodiversity by doing a bird survey at Memorial Park. A total of 14 different birds were observed (see the table below), with three of the more notable species highlighted below.

The gray catbird is one of the most common birds in New Jersey, second only to the American robin. It is all gray with a black cap on its head, and it has a distinct call that sounds like an annoyed cat. The catbird breeds throughout the United States and lower Canada, but is absent from the westernmost states, and spends the winter along the southeast United States coast and the eastern coast of Mexico and Central America, including the Caribbean. Even with its vast distribution, New Jersey plays a very important role for the gray catbird. At an estimated 71 birds per square mile, New Jersey has a greater density of gray catbirds than Pennsylvania and twice the density as New York state. Because the gray catbird seems to love breeding in New Jersey, we have an important responsibility to take care of these birds and keep them common. Keeping lots of shrubs and plants that produce berries in your yard will help these birds find nests and food, as will keeping your cats inside so they don’t catch an adult off-guard or pounce on a chick that’s still learning to fly.

The eastern towhee is not quite as common in our backyards, but it does breed in shrubby areas throughout New Jersey. This species breeds in the northeast quarter of the United States and winters in the southeast quarter. The male has a black head and back and a contrasting rusty color on his side, the female is mostly brown and builds her nest on the ground. The towhee population in New Jersey and other New England states has been drastically dropping since 1966. Many scientists believe this decline is because many of the old farms either turned into houses or forest, and there has been very little management in New England that brings that shrubby habitat back into the forest.

Like the eastern towhee, the indigo bunting population is dropping, though not as drastically. It breeds in the eastern half of the United States and spends the winter in southern Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean. The male indigo bunting is entirely dark blue (indigo) in color while the female is brown to be better camouflaged while sitting on the nest she built in the shrubs. Scientists believe the population decline of the indigo bunting is caused by the same reason as the towhee – the development of houses or letting fields grow into forest with little management to bring that shrubby habitat back into the forest.

Backyard Composting

By Adam Mickley, EOSC

Autumn is almost here, bringing those beautiful fall colors and lawns covered with fallen leaves. What will you do with all of those leaves? Rake or blow them into the woods to be forgotten? Bag and send them out as waste? Turn a blind eye and hope a strong wind carries them to the neighbor's yard? Shred them for compost? If you are not already shredding for compost, let's consider what you are missing.

What is compost? Compost is a nutritious mixture of decomposed materials that may be used in gardens as a fertilizer and soil amendment agent. Compost is a superior fertilizer when compared to chemical alternatives because it will not cause chemical burns nor result in the buildup of salts or other impurities in the soil that may cause plants to become stressed. The addition of compost also amends soil by improving the soil texture and improving the ability of the soil to both retain water and drain excess water. Best of all, compost is "free", requiring only some initial starting costs and some of your time. With proper care, the rewards can be truly great.

Think of a compost pile as a pet. A quiet pet who lives outside and almost never causes messes in the yard. Like all pets, a compost pile requires a home, food, water, and some basic care.

House Your Pet. Where will your pet compost pile live? Many types of composting bins are commercially available at garden or home improvement stores. If you are a DIY-type, an online search will reveal a variety of build-your-own projects. A simple option is wire or snow fencing about three feet high and four to ten feet in perimeter supported by posts. Even an old garbage can with vent holes through the sides, bottom and top can work. Whatever you choose, make sure the structure has good air flow, but never use treated lumber. Position the structure away from nearby structures, in case of odors or excess heat generation. Also, make sure the bin can be well secured to prevent critters (anything from mice to bears) from finding an easy food source.

Feed Your Pet. Like all pets, your compost pile requires a balanced diet. The two main types of compost food are "browns" and "greens".

Browns are high carbon sources that include shredded dry leaves, straw/hay, woodchips and sawdust from untreated wood, corn stalks and husks, shredded paper, egg and nut shells, hair and animal fur, paper (not colored or printed), paper towels, and paper tubes. The majority of your pile should be composed of browns, although too many browns may slow decomposition.

Greens are high nitrogen sources that include vegetable and fruit scraps, coffee grounds and filters, tea bags and leaves, fresh grass clippings (best left on the lawn; see the Newsletter article from Summer 2016), plant trimmings from your garden and houseplants, and manure. Manure from cows, horses, rabbits, etc. may be used. Be sparing with the amount of nitrogen you feed your compost pet, as too much nitrogen will make a smelly pile and the resulting compost will prevent plants from flowering or fruiting.

Whenever possible, chop or shred your compost pet food into small pieces, which will break down faster. Always cover a layer of greens with a layer of browns to cut down on flies and mask any odors. If you compost whole plants, always remove seed heads and seed pods.

DO NOT feed the following items to your compost pet: meat, fish, eggs, dairy products, oily foods or grease, bones, cat or dog waste, or diseased plants. Although many articles claim that nearly all of these items may be composted, there is a significant risk of spreading dangerous pathogens if the compost pile does not achieve a high enough temperature to become sterile. Also, never include any materials that have been treated with pesticides, including clippings from treated lawns or gardens, or any treated lumber sources. When in doubt, leave it out.

Water Your Pet. Your pile should be kept moist, but not overly wet. A perfect moisture level is when you can squeeze a few drops of water from a handful of leaves. Make sure each layer is moist as it is added. During the summer, your pile may dry out causing the composting process to slow down.

Care for Your Pet. Do not smooch your pile; add layers in light, airy lifts. Mix the pile regularly with a garden fork, moving the outer layer to the center at least once per month in warm weather and less often in cool weather. Do not rotate the pile if you smell an ammonia or other bad odor coming from the pile. Do not overcrowd your pile; if you have too much balanced waste, start a new pile. Keep your compost pet warm. Many commercially available bins are black to trap the sun's heat, but a black tarp over the pile can achieve the same effect. Depending upon weather patterns, what you feed the pile, and how well the greens and brown are chopped or shredded, the compost may be ready for use anywhere from four months to about a year. Compost is ready when it looks, smells and feels like rich, healthy soil with an earthy odor. This finished compost is ready to be mixed into, or added as a mulch to the top of, garden beds and planters. For the rest of the growing season, you will reap the rewards of the care you gave your compost pet.

2016 Lebanon Township Farm Passport Challenge By Adam Duckworth, EOSC

The Lebanon Township Green Team is again encouraging residents to strengthen our local economy and enjoy delicious local food by taking the Farm Passport Challenge. As national best-selling author, Anna Lappe, has stated, “Local food is about getting the freshest and best tasting food. It’s also about connecting to and strengthening your community. The more that you buy locally, the more you contribute to the health of your local economy. And you preserve farmland in your area, preventing sprawl and allowing natural habitats to thrive.”

To get started with the Passport Challenge, find and tear out the Passport from this newsletter and visit participating farms before October 18. For additional questions or feedback, contact LTGreenTeam@gmail.com.

POKEWEED: A NATIVE POISONOUS “LONGLASTING” PLANT By Douglas Diehl

There are extensive areas in our beautiful township where forest leads to fields or lawns. Pokeweed, or inkberry, is a common weed that will grow on habitat edges beginning early spring and lasting with its fruit into the fall. It is a perennial that overwinters. During the spring and summer, it will grow up to eight feet tall having leaves that are simply arranged and a main smooth stem that is green to purple. The plant develops long racemes of simple white flowers during the summer.

Pokeweed is toxic to humans and animals. Late summer into fall the flowers have changed to elongated clusters of berries that are deep purple with a crimson juice inside. Birds will consume the berries since they are unaffected by its toxic juice.

For reference, the scientific name is Phytolacca americana. Fields and yard edges may be areas of highest risk to people especially children who may, by mistake, see the berries as something to eat. The fruit will persist into the fall and is attractive to look at.

Changewater United Methodist Church Welcomes New Pastor

The Changewater United Methodist Church welcomed a new pastor to our church family on July 3, 2016. Pastor Sarah Borgstrom Lee is a commissioned minister in the United Methodist Church (UMC). She hails from Burlington, NJ, which she would identify as the south part of Central Jersey. In September, Sarah will enter her eighth year in professional ministry, having previously served as Youth Pastor for the Broad Street UMC in Burlington, NJ, Pastoral Intern at Newtown UMC in Newtown, PA, and Senior Pastor at Centenary UMC in Lambertville, NJ, and Linvale UMC in Ringoes, NJ.

Pastor Sarah has a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology, as well as a minor in ceramics from Arcadia University, and she completed her ministry degree at Princeton Theological Seminary. Pastor Sarah believes Christianity isn't just a set of ideas to agree to, it is a way to live. She loves to help people explore ways of bringing something spiritual into their everyday lives. Pastor Sarah particularly enjoys teaching ancient Christian spiritual practices, like breath prayers (a form of Christian meditation), and Lectio Divina, a mindful way of reading Scripture, as a way to bring an experience of the holy into everyday life. When she's not working at the churches she serves, you'll find her puttering around in her garden or hiking with her husband Josh.

Pastor Sarah brings a special creativity to our worship services and has a special way of sharing her enthusiasm with both children and adults. Come out and meet her on Sunday mornings at 9:00 AM. Sunday School will resume in September.
