Doran Scoreboard Installed on Memorial Football Field

Two years ago, the Lebanon Township community suffered a heartbreaking loss with the passing of Mike and Ellen Doran within a year of each other. The Dorans were longtime community members, parents, coaches, and friends. As a special tribute to the Doran Family, the Lebanon Township Park Committee and the Junior Vikings Football Program raised funds to purchase a scoreboard dedicated to the Doran Family for the Junior Vikings football field at Memorial Park. The scoreboard has been installed, creating a reflective and lasting place for Mike and Ellen's sons and family members to visit, while helping us honor these two wonderful people.

Both the Lebanon Township Park Committee and the Junior Vikings Football Program would like to extend their heartfelt thanks to Steve Duryea and Charlie Fortenbacker for their many hours of organizing and working on the installation. To have a scoreboard emblazoned with the "Doran Family" name looking over the football field seems a fitting tribute for a family who participated in so many community activities and events for so many years.

Thanks to all for your generosity and support in making this tribute possible. Look for information this fall for the scoreboard dedication! If you are still interested in making a donation, please email Beth Fischer at babsie122@comcast.net for more information.

VERNAL POOLS

By: Doug Diehl

Large puddles or small shallow ponds of water may be found in wooded areas on private property as well as open space preserves and parks. These “vernal pools” occur in low-lying swales or in regions of slow drainage. These temporary shallow water bodies may also originate from a temporary high water table or from artesian springs. They can be man-made, occurring along roadsides, ditches or other drainage systems.

From Spring to Summer

Vernal pools will be more numerous after a snowy winter or a wet early spring. As spring progresses to summer, these pools will evaporate, often becoming a muddy forest floor. The pools are essential for the breeding and developmental stage of certain amphibians. Later, the wetland forest floor serves as an area for feeding on mostly small insects and other small invertebrates. The forest floor litter also provides shelter from predators and weather variables for these amphibians.

Vernal pools are necessary for much of our amphibian species, since the beginning of their life cycle depends on their existence. Adult frogs and certain salamanders will migrate to these pools to deposit and fertilize their eggs. Since the water is isolated and temporary, there are no fish to act as predators for the developing frog tadpoles or larvae of salamanders. In addition, these young developing stages will feed on algae, small animals such as mosquito larvae, and plankton that flourish in these nutrient waters. This microscopic food source is important energy as the tadpoles mature and change into adults.

Amphibians such as the Wood Frog and Eastern Tiger Salamander must migrate to these pools to reproduce for the survival of their species during early spring. They may be subject to being run over when crossing roads, to obstructions, or to predators. Marbled Salamanders will migrate in the fall or early winter to low lying areas to lay their eggs in mud and wet leaves. In spring, these areas usually pool with melted winter ice and snow. Migration is a vulnerable necessity to most amphibians.

The most vocal among early spring amphibians is the Spring Peeper. This small frog may migrate to small ponds or streams to breed in March and April. In wooded areas they will also use vernal pools to lay their eggs near shallow water or water's edge, allowing tadpoles to feed and develop. You can hear the males making their distinctive high pitch call to attract females, although we rarely see them except when they migrate to wetland areas.

You may have vernal pools on your property or you may notice them as you walk the open space areas in our beautiful rural township. Treat them kindly, since they are essential to the life cycle of small animals and amphibians.

A vernal pool in early spring shows a spice bush with its green flowers. Spice bush indicates a wetland, even if it is temporary.

Wetland vegetation is seen emerging from a vernal pool in mid-spring. These plants provide protection and a surface for the egg masses.

Environmental & Open Space Commission (continued)

Late spring/early summer skunk cabbage is a definite wetland indicator with its large distinct leaves. Small wetlands are common in our Township woodlands.

Vernal Pools During the Summer

Most soils are aerobic or contain oxygen. Oxygen in soils is important for plant roots to respire by absorbing oxygen and carbohydrates and by releasing carbon dioxide. Vernal pools will many times feature exposed areas of dark hydric soil in the summer. A hydric soil is formed under conditions of water saturation or ponding long enough to develop oxygen poor or anaerobic conditions that discourage vegetation growth.

As you walk in our woodlands this summer, you may notice areas that were once vernal pools. Wetland vegetation will attempt to grow around these oxygen poor, muddy areas where the soil is slightly less saturated. During hot, dry summer days, reptiles, amphibians, land snails, and other animals may use these muddy areas as resting places from hot, dry conditions. This "summer hibernation" is called aestivation. Once again, treat them kindly, since vernal pools are important even during our summer.

Do You Remember Butler Park?

What do you remember about Butler Park?

Did you ride the Robert E. Lee boat, or go for a family reunion in the grove?

Swimming, boat rides, picnics and, of course, the Merry-Go-Round. Butler Amusement Park was along the Musconetcong River. It was built around 1929 and closed around 1952.

We believe the Merry-Go-Round originally came from a traveling carnival and is now in Wrightstown P.A. at a place called Indian Walk Carousel Village.

The Historians would like to know more about the park. We would be interested in your stories and pictures of Butler Park. Please email us at LebanonTownHistSoc@gmail.com or drop a note off at the Museum.

Box Tops and Labels for Education

The next time you make dinner, before you throw out that can or box, check if it has a Box Top Labels, Tyson Label or Label for Education Points! These labels are worth money to the Lebanon Township PTA.

Thanks to your efforts in clipping and collecting labels from the packaged food in your pantry, teachers at Valley View and Woodglen schools have been able to receive free supplies for their classrooms and fund programs for our children. Please continue to collect these points, and either mail to Valley View School, or drop the labels at Bunnvale Library or the Municipal Building. ### Six-Year-Old Author Publishes Her First Book

Six-year-old Finnoula Louise steps onto the book publishing stage, taking her place among a select group of child authors published before age 18. Like many authors, Finnoula's writing stems from her love of storytelling, her clever imagination and her lifelong fondness for books. But the secret of her success as a child author and illustrator is her ability to focus on a task for long periods. As a kindergarten student, Finnoula is just learning to read and write, so her first title is a picture book with minimal, but poignant, text.

Published by Little Valley Books®, Finnoula's first book, "Aminals" Animals, is now available in New Jersey bookstores and online at major booksellers, including Barnes & Noble and Amazon.com. Children up to age 6 will delight as they "roar, prooot, and screek" along with 12 friendly, silly animals, while exploring a whimsical world of animals as seen through the eyes of a child. In this first-words book, children can read each animal name as they search for hidden pictures and read fun facts along the way. Watch the news for upcoming dates when Finnoula will appear at local bookstores and events signing copies of her book.

Finnoula's second book, due out in November, takes a light-hearted look at holidays, cooking and gluten-free recipes with Cookies Cookies: A Year of Holiday Treats. While appropriate for all children, it will be of special interest to those, like Finnoula, with celiac disease or other gluten-related sensitivities.

Little Valley Books are books by kids, for kids. The mission of Little Valley Books is to foster a love of reading, storytelling, and creativity in a safe environment, where kids can share ideas, earn rewards, and give back to others using kid-friendly tools along with appropriate adult support. Little Valley Books is an imprint of Woodglen Publishing LLC, a small publishing firm run by founder/owner Stephanie Petron Cahill. Stephanie has been shepherding the development of educational and children's published materials for more than 20 years.
