

The Iron Industry of Hunterdon County

In 1742, William Allen and Joseph Turner established the first ironworks in Philadelphia's colonial times when they leased a 300-acre site extending from present day Califon to Pattenburg. Come learn how they manufactured cannonballs for the Revolutionary War, railroad switches, track and other products needed to expand the nationwide railroad system. Our local history is fascinating, don't miss this lecture by local historian Chip Colombo!
